Congressman M. E. Rhodes, chairman of the House committee on Mines and Mining, made a consistent speech before the House as a committee of the whole on the new general tariff bill on July 14th, laying before that body the urgent necessity of giving the metallic and chemical mining industry of the country better tariff protection to revive it from the depression in which it now languishes. While the scope of his argument extended to this whole industry throughout the country, it particularly included and stressed the reasons for better protection of the barytes, lead and cobalt mining industries of this, the district he represents. And we all here know what the welfare and prosperity of these industries mean to the people of the community. Mr. Rhodes has apparently labored tirelessly to secure this benefit for us, for the protective schedules he asked for were, we presume, adopted in the general tariff bill which passed the House last Thursday by a vote of 289 to 127.
